Baker's Experience:

I learned a tremendous amount ... Jack Wylie was an open book. He would tell me the whys of each and every case ... so decision making became easy. He later referred to me as the iconoclast as I did indeed ask him a lot of questions.

Ron Stoney had a referral practice of the unusual and tougher cases. His frustration level was sometimes exceeded and the Stoney stomp is a real entity. He did not take his frustrations out on the house staff. Bill Ehrenfeld was more laid back - good surgeon. "Don't worry Baker, no sense in both of us worrying."

All were good teachers. All were interested in organizing and presenting data.
